Questions You Should Be Able To Answer:

Does your school have an up-to-date acceptable use policy for students and staff?

Does your Internet filter thoroughly enforce that policy?

Can you determine when a violation of policy occurs without a teacher having to physically see it?

Can you immediately get a report to show where your students are going on the Internet?

Do you prohibit access to free e-mail sites and places like Myspace?

If you can't answer every one of these questions with an emphatic YES, you may have a BIG problem with Internet security!

You need SchoolGuard!

SchoolGuard stops access to inappropriate Internet content and enforces your Acceptable Use Policy!

- Monitor Internet usage and stop inappropriate Internet access cold!
- Create Blacklists of forbidden sites to access.
- Block access by keywords such as "porn" or "gambling".
- Restrict access by category such as shopping, gambling or sports.
- Create white-lists of "allowed" sites to visit.
- Control access by computer or by user.
- Get regular reports that show where students and staff are spending their time while on the Internet.

Among 9-19 year olds who go online at least once per week:

- 57 per cent have come into contact with pornography online (compared with 16 per cent of parents who say their children have seen porn online)
- 46 per cent claim to have given out personal information (5 per cent of parents realize this)
- A third have received unwanted sexual or nasty comments (though only about 1 in 20 parents appear aware of this)
